Unmistakably, we become a mix of global cultures and DNA information that will preserve and pass along our individuality, due to multiple combinations out there and in spite of the visibly narrow human typology range. We should understand, now more than ever, that humankind is homogeneous and round, but at the same time, individuals remain unique as a result of their family journey and heritage. What we thought we know about race so far, is becoming more and more "HUMAN RACE" and skin color will no longer be used as a differentiator by society.
